To whom it may concern:

Jon initiated and led the engagement between Crossrail and the CQI, in conjunction with his head of quality colleague, as part of the Crossrail ambition to improve quality management within the UK's wider built environment and infrastructure sector. This included between 2012 and 2016:

- Establishing quality management competence as a contract requirement for suppliers to Crossrail.
- Providing technical input into the development of a CQI/Crossrail training programme to bring supplier quality practitioners up to an appropriate level for the Crossrail programme and CQI membership, supporting the training over 70 quality practitioners in the supply chain.
- Facilitating the placement of CQI case study and lessons learned regarding the above into the Crossrail Learning Legacy portal, quality management section.

As part of this work, Jon was a founder member of the CQI Construction Special Interest Group which grew out of the Crossrail project and has expanded the scope of activity from competence development to engagement with allied professional bodies.
